MILITARY INSPECTION AT

Major-General Digby Barker finished his inspection of the Regiment yesterday, when about six hundred men were put through their facings at Kowloon. Various mance avres were carried out by the officers in turn, such as marching, countermarching, for ming squares to receive cavalry, &c., all of which were executed with precision and smartness. At the conclusion of the in spection the men practised an attack. A com pany of about sixty men under the command Francisco. Georg Hen Ven and Haw Mes Son of Lieut. The following correspondence has been officially forwarded to us for publication:-

Colonial Secretary's Office, Hongkong, 28th January, 1891. Sir,-I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to acknowledge the receipt of a petition without date addressed to the Officer Ad ministering the Government praying for the release of Robert Fracer Smith and Guorge W. Ward; presently prisoners in Victoria Gaol. I am in reply to transmit to you for the in formation of the signatories to the petition a copy of a minute by His Excellency on the subject. I have, &c., F. FLEMING, Colonial Secretary.

The Hon. P. Ryrie.

The Governor has given his but attention the petition, signed by a large number of the phabitants of the colony, in favour of the remission of the sentence of six months' imprisonment with hard labour recently pused upon Frager Smith and George William Ward for conspiring to bring a false charge.

The grounds arged for this remission are (1.)—The alleged weakness of the evidence i (2.)—The failure to adduce, until too late evidence which, as the Ohief Justice (who tried the case) is alleged to have intimated, might have arrival at the state pavilion of H.R.H. the influenced the jury in favour of the prisoner.

Frager Smith from imprisonment with hard As regards (1) I regret that the evidence having been regarded as sufficent by the jury whose verdict was approved by the learned indge who tried the case. I do not see sufficient reason to justify me in acting upon a different

As the last of the pageant marched belief that they ought or would have had any past the Royal Chair, the Crown Prince was material weight with the jury if they had been conducted into the adj ining temple to listen adduced at the proper time. On these grounds therefore I see no reason differ from the decision which was arrived at before my arrival in the colony by the O. A. G. in Council. As regards (3), which affects only the prisoner Fraser Smith, I am placed in a position of peopliar difficulty by the fact, which has become well known, that a resolution was arrived at. also before my return, for the appointment of a days the coresponds were exactly the same. medical commission to inquire whether further imprisonment in gaol would involve danger to the health of the prisoner Fraser Smith.

When this commission reported that such danger would be so greated, it seemed to me the first instance that I was thus relieved of all responsibility, and that there was nothing to honoured ceremonies, understood only, however, hinder the gratification of a natural inclination to mercy; but subsequent consideration has o vinced me that to constitute danger to health or even to the life of a prisoner as, ipso facto, a reason for his release, would be to set a most dangerous precedent, and by rendering it impossible with any consistency to permit any have a much deeper significance here than at further imprisonment in the case of the pri- first appears, and most have a relative bearing soner released would be practically to grant the Royal Palace and was borne down in procession, seated in a state palanguin. He appeared in excellent health and while passing the pavilion of the foreigners courteously kept his colmet raised and graciously bowed in response to the salutations from the visitors. Arriving at the state pavilion His Majesty left the palanquin and snated himself in view of the public. At the extremity of the enclosure has been built a representation of the wonderful Mount Kailasa, or Maru, the northern peak of the Himslayas, where according to the Hindoos, the god Siva resides and rules over the north-east quarter, and the evening sun shining on the whole pageant created a mene of Fairvland, Simultaneously with the King seating himself there appeared on a platform, at the base of the mount, Thewaders. and genii, the latter arrayed after the old Greek feshion, as understood by foreigners generally, upo Kritais, under masks, and these characters performed during the proceedings. The blaring of trampets and the strains of the military band proclaimed after a short interval the arrival of the procession. H.R.H Prince Prachack the Lord Chamberlain, personally led and following him came a detachment of the Palace Guard, their rifles with fixed bayonets at the "right shoulder." preceded by an officer of the Army bearing the Royal Arms of Siam. Next in order marched two noblemen, the Under Secretaries of the Mahti and Kalahome Departments, in the ancient Siamess dress of their order. Upon the Crown Prince he was assisted to ascend by His Majesty and occupied there, the seat set apart for him while the procession filed past. On this occasion the spectacle exceeded in detail that of former ceremonies of a like nature, especially so as regards the dresses. The costumes of the Bighlanders, Burmese, Hindoos, Musselmen, Annamese and Malays attracted much attention, and those present had an opportunity of studying the features and dress of a people not much known in Bangkok, namely, the Lusny Phraor one hour to the Bhuddist priests reciting the Pali text, but to this ceremony no one was admitted. An occasion was here taken to distribute largess, those who took part in the proces ion re civing, from regularly appointed officers, one silver tical each...

After the consecrating chants the procession returned in the same order and the ceremonies ended for the day. On the three following The interest which controd in the festivities attracted an unu wally large concourse of Siamese and foreigners to the Royal Palace enclosure on Thursday, the 24th January, to witness the colminating coremonies. At all Royal Courts there is a cortain significance in the timeby the initiated, though they are none the less of interest to newcomers. And at the Court of Siam these peremonies have the anction and approval of antiquity and precedent, and are the regular outcome of the conditions of Royalty and Oriental methods of government. The preliminary arrangements for the processions were in themselves quite elaborate, but were confined to the interior of the Palace compound, and the dependencies of the Palace proper, which, however, include so many buildings and so much space as to form almost a city in itself. From each onter gate, along the sides of the walks, had been erected bamboo feuces at intervals, of a unique design, panelled in diamonds and squares, and profusely decorated with pendant hearts and other cuttings of bamboo. which made a very musical sound as the wind fluttered them. Something very tasteful was in the bindings of the frames, which in places took the form of an open lotus flower, and much resembled this at a distance. Large bamboo poles were erected at intervals all over the ground, and these in size as they were higher up in the air. "be enclosure where the procession passed, but arrangements had been made for the accommodtion of foreign visitors to view the spectacle inside the Palace compound, where chairs were provided in the Royal Library opposite the Palace, and a pavilion for the dignitaries of the Realm, the chief officials in Siamers employ, and the Corps Diplomatique.

The State pavilion, which ecoupied the most prominent place, in front of the Maha Prasaht, was reserved for His Majesty, and minor positions on or about it for members of the Royal Family. At exactly half-past ton the King emerged from the Royal Palace and was greeted with the usual reverences and with the Binmese National Anthem by the band. His Majesty seated bimself in a state palanquin, and while being borne to the Royal pavilion set apart for him, acknowledged the saintes and courtesies of the Princes, the Governors of the Dependencies and the Foreign Representatives at the Court of Siam. We saw also people from Tringano, Patani. Kedah, Renawag, Cambodia and Annam; Peguans, Laos, Karrens and various representatives from the Shan States, all had come over to pay their respects to the King, and do homage to the Crown Prince of Siam. Arriving at the State pavilion His Majesty left the palanquin and, retiring to the back of the apartment for a few moments, reappeared in his State robes and wearing the Crown of Siam. The proceedings at this point were identical with those described at length in our issue of the 21st instant, except that the Crown Prince appeared on this occasion richly attired in white and literally covered with costly gems, and was seated in a gilt and jewelled sedan chair surrounded by a bodyguard of handsomely dressed w pobles. His head was shielded from the sun by the Pra-kruat, or yellow umbrella of royalty, and all around him sparkled and flashed gorgeous fans. Before him were borne in the hands of young maidens tropical birds of superb plumage. For the proper exhibition of pathological and various ages who were enabled to maintain

Soon after this, while the procession was filing past, Royal occupants of the State pavilion proceeded at five minutes after eleven-the propitious hour decreed by the Bhramin astrologors to the Maha Prasabt where the relica of former Kings of Siam are deposited. A dividend of 10 per cent, per annum was declared at the half-yearly general meeting of Naigai Wata Kaisha (Native and Foreign Cotton Co.) of Danka, held on the 20th January. The net proceeds during the latter half of last year were yen 14,366,461. We deeply sympathize, says the Ocaka Asahi

Shimbun, with the family of Mr. Nankivell in their serrow for his loss. The Misses Nankivell wishing to search for him around Osaka and Sakai, applied on the 22nd January to the Water Police Station at Kobe for a steam launch, and also for an interpreter and a constable to accompany them. The officials granted their request, and sent out a steam launch. Fond as the Japanese are of railways, they do not always view their construction with equanimity. The Osaka Company has recently raised a storm in a tea-cup by passing through some land at Oteramaru, Yamata, without obtaining the proprietor's permission. Since the Government has consented to the line being laid, it probably matters little what the proprietor's private opinions are, but he and his friends are owing to a contest between the President and very excited, and called in a body on the Rail- the Congress. SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY. Spiders, says Mons. F. Hement, have eight legs, but previous to the ingenious experiments

Mons. Carlet it was not known how they walk. The learned professor of Grenoble made a comparative study of the walk of four, six and Hotels eight footed animals. Among quadrupeds, for example, the giraffe ambles, that is to say, alternately advances the two legs of the same side. while the horse has two guits, for it can amble or alternately advance one of the fore legs with Insurancesthe hind one of the opposite side. The movements of lizards, frogs and turtles in no wise resemble that of the quadruped mammals, despite the fact that they have the same number of limbs. Insects simultaneously and altermail of the 2nd January, arrived yesterday. The nately advance the odd legs of the same following telegrams are from Coylon and side (first and third) with the even leg (second) of the opposite, while they are reating upon the three others. The three-points of support are the apices of a triangle. They walk like two quadrupeds that would have the two middle legs in common, one possessing the four first, and the other the four last. Finally, spiders walk like two quadrupeds in a line with one another, that is to say, by advancing the legs of uneven number (one and three) on one side, and, connection of certain members of Congress with at the same time, these of even number (two and four) on the opposite side. Suppress two legs of the same rank, two odd or two even, but one on one side and the other on the opposite, so as to reduce the number of their legs to six, as in insects, they immediately begin to walk like the latter. Remove two more legs, they walk like quadrupeds. There is, then, a general law of
